

Common Course Outline

VETT 207

Large Animal Procedures

2 Semester hours

The Community College of Baltimore County

Description

Identical to catalog description; includes list of prerequisites.

Overall Course Objectives

Upon completion of this course:

1. The student will be able to demonstrate and explain different methods of restraint used in handling various large domestic animals.
2. The student will be able to demonstrate and explain various techniques involved in nursing procedures as applied to various large domestic animals.
3. The Student will be able to demonstrate and explain principles involved in surgical preparation and assisting with respect to various large domestic animals
4. The student will be able to demonstrate and explain proper techniques for giving injections to various large domestic animals.
5. The student will be able to demonstrate and explain proper techniques for performing Venipuncture in various large domestic animals.
6. The student will be able to explain the different anatomical differences in various large domestic animals.

Major Topics

1. Examination room area
2. Surgical preparation and assisting
3. Large animal nursing
4. Osteology review

Course Requirements

Grading/Exams: Grading procedures will be determined by individual faculty member but will include the following:

Written Exams
Cumulative written final
Assignments/Quizzes

Attendance/Participation

Other Course Information